This would be an excellent add-on for our trip to Houston. Steve Pfeiffer

Dear Steve,

Many thanks for your letter of 31 October and for the information on the Houston Committee on Foreign Relations.

We are now actively planning a trip to Houston but have not pinned down the dates. I will let you know just as soon as we come up with a time frame to see if we can't arrange a meeting. I can provide details when I see you next week.

Sincerely,

SIGNED

Herbert E. Hetu

Dear Herb:

I enjoyed talking with you on the telephone last week and look forward to meeting you for lunch at Langley on November 10th, if that should still prove convenient. As we agreed on the telephone, I will call you after I arrive in Washington on the 8th or 9th.

As we discussed, I would greatly appreciate your presenting the possibility of Admiral Turner having dinner and addressing the Houston Committee on Foreign Relations, should he visit Houston this winter. I have enclosed last year's list of members of the Committee and a xerox of those pages from the Annual Report of the Council on Foreign Relations in New York which describes the Committees on Foreign Relations Program, with which the Houston Committee is affiliated. As you will see from the membership list, this group includes leaders from all areas of the Houston community, including the press and media, business, finance, law (with the exception of their allowing a tadpole like me in), academia and public sector. The present Deputy Secretary of Defense, Charles Duncan, was a member before he left Houston for Washington as is Willard Walbridge, Senior Vice President of Capital Cities Broadcasting Corp., about whom you and I corresponded earlier.

I look forward to seeing you soon.

Most sincerely yours,

Steven B. Pfeiffer

ANNUAL REPORT

September 1, 1975—August 31, 1976

COUNCIL ON FOREIGN RELATIONS, INC.

THE HAROLD PRATT HOUSE

58 EAST 68th STREET | NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10021

Report on

THE COMMITTEES ON FOREIGN RELATIONS PROGRAM

THE THIRTY-SIX Committees on Foreign Relations, situated in as many cities throughout the country, are educational organizations that bring together their members from time to time to discuss problems of international relations and to learn the views of visiting speakers. In governance, membership invitation, finances, and program selection, each Committee is autonomous. Mr. Rolland Bushner, Director, Committees on Foreign Relations Program, assists in developing and arranging programs for the Committees. About 70% of the Committees' meetings are arranged through his office, the remainder by the individual Committees.

In May 1976, the total number of members belonging to all the Committees was 2,965, some 5% above the previous year's total.

In honor of the national Bicentennial, the 38th Annual Conference of the Committees was held in Philadelphia. Sixty-six persons representing 35 Committees attended at the Council's invitation on Friday and Saturday, June 11-12. Befitting the occasion, the Conference theme was broad: "Coping with a Changed World at the Outset of America's Third Century." At the dinner on Friday, which was co-hosted by the Council and the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia, Secretary of Commerce Elliot L. Richardson spoke on the interrelationships between domestic and foreign policy and U.S. relations with the developing countries. David Rockefeller presided. The dinner was held at the Franklin Institute, a national monument. The daytime sessions of the Conference, including a business session, took place at the historic headquarters of the American Philosophical Society.

During 1975-76, the Committees as a whole held a total of 319 meetings (the largest number ever), which were addressed by 190 statesmen and other experts on international affairs. Of the 116 American citizens who spoke before the Committees, 43 were Council members; they addressed 79 meetings.

The greatest number of programs (86) dealt with Europe and the Mediterranean. Many of these touched upon détente; 21 dealt specifically with relations between the United States and the Soviet Bloc, including East Germany; 16 were devoted to Spain and Portugal, and 11 focused on leftist political currents in Western European countries. Asia and the Asian subcontinent were discussed at 69 meetings, the Middle East at 48, Africa at 16, and Latin America at 13. In addition to U.S. foreign policy in general, discussed at a number of meetings, functional subjects included: relationships with the developing countries, such as "a new international economic order," food and population, energy and resources, and multinational corporations (55); national security, arms control and intelligence (20); and international trade and monetary problems (7).

The 43 Council members who led meetings of the Committees on Foreign Relations during the year were:
